

Because of members' increasing use of smartphones and tablets for web browsing, NASCOE has updated the website to be mobile-friendly! When you visit the new site, you will notice that is a much different format than the previous site, so here is an overview of how the new setup works.

The primary navigation menu is at the top, but you will notice that many of the page headings from the previous website are missing. This was to create a more mobile-friendly environment. By hovering over the main menu headings, you will see links to sub-pages. These headings and their respective landing pages are permanent and contain information that we want to make readily available for current and prospective members.

The website is now in a "blog" format. This means that updates on various topics will be provided as posts which will be categorized and tagged with the respective program area or topic. On the home page, you will see a listing of the most recent posts on the right sidebar. This listing will change continuously as new updates are added. If you want to view an individual post in this list, simply click on the title. If you would like to view a post that is no longer on the "Recent Posts" listing, you can find it by viewing the archives. These are separated by month, and you may use the Archives dropdown box on the home page to jump to a particular month.

Another way to find relevant posts is to click on a "Hot Topic" or "Tag" seen in the right sidebar on the home page. Hot Topics are general categories, while tags are buzzwords that are frequently used in NASCOE updates. The list of tags will continue to grow as more updates are posted. Once you are viewing a post, there will be related posts at the bottom so that you may immediately jump between posts covering similar topics.

Also, you will notice a small "Follow" tab in the lower right corner of your screen. By clicking on that tab and inputting your email address, you can follow the NASCOE blog so that you receive an email each time a new post is added.

Another big change is the "NASCOE Gear" page. This page is a storefront where you can shop for NASCOE and FSA apparel! We are currently only accepting payment by checks, but credit card/ACH payment options will soon be added. While there are currently only a limited number of items available on this page, we hope to expand the selection in the near future.

We welcome your feedback on the new website. Please e-mail nascoewebmaster@live.com with comments and suggestions. Thanks!
